

Discovering Babel:

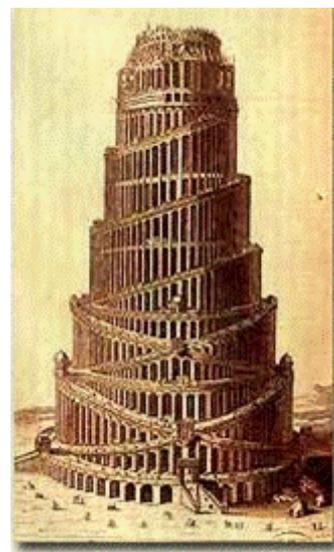

How to make your language resources discoverable

A one-day workshop at the Oxford Text Archive

Friday 24th June 2011 9:30-17:00

Acland Building, 23 Banbury Road, Oxford

(next door to Oxford University Computing Services)

The workshop is part of the JISC-funded Discovering Babel project, and is for researchers who create and use corpora and other digital language resources.

Sessions will cover:

- Discovering Babel: enhancing the Oxford Text Archive
- CLARIN Virtual Language Observatory
- 'Show-and-tell', showcasing the resources that participants wish to share
- Round-table launching CLARINET, a new UK-wide network

More information on the background and goals of the workshop is at:

<http://blogs.oucs.ox.ac.uk/martinw/>

Sign up for this free workshop at:

http://www.surveymonkey.com/s/discovering_babel

More information from:

Martin Wynne

martin.wynne@oucs.ox.ac.uk

Ylva Berglund-Prytz

ylva.berglund@oucs.ox.ac.uk

While the prime audience for this workshop is UK-based researchers, it is open to all, and an international perspective to our discussions would be most welcome!

Oxford University Computing Services

JISC